

Kuala Gandah Elephant Sanctuary & Aborigine's Settlement

DURATION: 6 - 7 HOURS

CAPACITY: RECOMMENDED 100 PERSONS

This tour is an adventure from Kuala Lumpur to Pahang to experience life in the forest through visiting Aborigine villages and getting up close and personal with elephants in the Kuala Gandah Elephant Conservation Center. The journey there will take approximately 1 hour and 45 minutes. We first visit an Aborigine settlement, where we get to see the daily lifestyles of the 'Orang Asli', the name of these forest people

Kuala Gandah Elephant Orphanage Sanctuary, Pahang is a rare and fantastic opportunity to get up close to endemic Malaysian elephants. It will give you a very rare opportunity to learn about these displaced gentle giants.

Get the chance to ride them through the jungle, with the help of an elephant guide, or mahout. For the brave and adventurous, there are opportunities to take the elephants down to the river and help give them a bath! There really is no better opportunity than this to get in touch with these grey giants.

It is estimated that there are only 1,200 wild Asian Elephants, also known as Elephas Maximus, left in Malaysia and this is the only conservation centre set up to relocate these displaced pachyderms.

The elephants here have been rescued from all over Peninsula Malaysia, providing them a safe sanctuary in the wild.
